(Case)

21. Read the paragraph and answer the questions given below.

Naval Headquarters initiated Operation Chutney on December 1, establishing a surveillance and patrolling exercise to secure the maritime approaches. This operation involved the deployment of two anti-aircraft frigates, Betwa and Beas, which conducted a linear patrol along the Goan coast, positioned 13 kilometers away from the shore. Their primary objective was to monitor all incoming and outgoing traffic, including shipping, aircraft, and personnel, within the Portuguese enclaves. Additionally, they were authorized to retaliate with necessary force if engaged by Portuguese units either in the air or on the surface. This patrol, orchestrated by a relay of ships, persisted until after D-Day, undergoing minor adjustments in length and distance from the coast. While the ships primarily gathered intelligence related to merchant shipping, they accurately identified the presence of an airfield at Dabolim. Despite this, no air activity apart from occasional use by transport aircraft was observed, indicating the absence of other airfields and Portuguese combat aircraft in the vicinity. Furthermore, the patrol vigilantly tracked the movements of the Portuguese frigate Afonso de Albuquerque, discerning no other men-of-war of similar size within the operational area.
